Considering a South American honeymoon?

If so, I'm hoping my next two posts will seal the deal. If not, they should at least persuade you to add this remarkable continent to your list of potential destinations. My husband and I spent 12 days in Chile and Argentina following our April 25 wedding. Since the seasons are opposite ours below the equator, it was fall in these countries—but that's actually a beautiful time to visit, especially if you plan to be active. And active we were. We started out with four nights in Chilean Patagonia, at the Explora lodge located inside Torres del Paine National Park. During our first two days we hiked a total of 20 miles. We got up close and personal with a gigantic glacier and conquered a steep climb to the base of the park's namesake towers ("torres" in Spanish).
